This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

IN this volume will be found the proceedings of the Courts Leet of the manor of Manchester from the 25th April, 1787, to the 21st October, 1805. The entries for each Court are on the whole somewhat longer than those in the two preceding volumes, but the proceedings are of the same general character, and do not call for much special comment. There are the usual fines for selling articles unfit for consumption, and for making use of unfair weights and measures, as well as for non-attendance at the several Courts. Many persons were fined for not serving in the various offices to which they had been elected, and this culminated in the proceedings at the Court held on the 1st October, 1804, when Mr. John Stonehouse and Mr. John Railton, the two Constables who were at first proposed, declined to accept office, and were each fined £20. At the adjourned meeting, Mr. Richard Entwisle and Mr. Thomas Potter were elected in their places, but on Mr. Potter declining to serve he was promptly fined £100, and Mr. John Ratcliffe was elected in his place. These fines seem to have been duly paid.

The duties of the various officers annually elected at the Michaelmas Courts are well described in a note to the second edition of Mr. William Roberts's "Charge to the Jury of the Court Leet for the Manor of Manchester," originally delivered on the 15th October, 1788, and reprinted in a second edition in 1793. (See Appendix No. I.) This note is as follows:—

> "The following is a list of the several officers which are annually chosen for the Manor of Manchester: The Borough-reeve, two Constables and Deputy Constable, Market-Lookers for fish and flesh, Appraisers of goods, Officers for Corn Weights and Measures, Searchers and Sealers of Leather, Whitemeats, or officers who are to take care that butter be of the weight of sixteen ounces to the pound, and that milk be sold by a sealed measure, if not, to seize it, and present the person at the next Court Leet; Market-Lookers for the assize of bread; Bye-Law-men, who take care that all sloughs, plattings, water-courses, hedges, and ditches, within the Manor, be kept in sufficient repair; if not to present them at the next Court Leet; Officers for seeing that ale and beer be wholesome; Scavengers; Officers for muzzling mastiff dogs; Officers to prevent [? sic for present] inmates, who are to see whether there be any poor families likely to become chargeable to the town, and to inform the overseers of the poor that they may be compelled to produce a certificate from their last place of settlement, or to be sent there; Officers to prevent ingrossing, regrating and forestalling; Officers to prevent cutting and gashing of hides; Officers to distribute rent charge from Collyhurst; Officers to take care of the conduit; Pounder, and Beadles."

As pointed out in the Introduction to the last volume, the office of Deputy Constable had greatly increased in importance, and that officer's salary had been raised from £20 in 1756 to £150 in 1786. In this volume the salary paid to the various Deputy Constables appointed remained at the sum of £150, until at the Court held on the 21st October, 1805, Mr. Joseph Nadin was re-appointed Deputy Constable at a salary of £200 a year. The salaries paid to the three Beadles did not increase much, but starting at £20, £20, and £12 respectively, they gradually rose to £25 a year each.

Many changes took place in the government of the rapidly increasing town of Manchester during the period covered by this volume. The old system of governing the town, as if it were a small village, by means of the somewhat obsolete and effete organisation of the Court Leet had been found utterly ineffectual, and in the year 1791 an Act of Parliament was obtained for the purpose of lighting, watching, and cleaning the town. The Commissioners appointed under this Act consisted of the Boroughreeve and Constables for the time being, the Warden and Fellows of the Collegiate Church, and the owners and occupiers of any buildings of £30 a year annual value. A police-rate of one shilling and threepence in the pound on the rent of the houses in the town was levied, and the money so raised provided, as stated by Mr. Aston in his Picture of Manchester, in 1816, "fifty three watchmen, who nightly parade the streets from eight o'clock in the evening till six in the morning, during the winter months and from ten in the evening till four in the morning during summer. The town [exclusive of the suburbs] is lighted in the winter months by upwards of 2,758 lamps and the streets are swept and the soil carried off, twice every week." He also adds: "A large house, in King Street, has been appropriated as a Police Office, in which are apartments for transacting the business of the police; where commissioners sit, occasionally, to hear the appeals—clerks are employed for keeping the constables' accounts and those of the different articles of expense in lighting &c. The lamp-office and the office for billeting soldiers is also in the same building; as is also the dwelling-houses of the deputy-constable and the beadles. From hence the whole of the watchmen set out every night to their respective stands; and here they bring back their rattles &c. when the approaching day puts an end to their nocturnal duties. Three of the beadles reside immediately behind the Police Office, to be always at hand, to assist the deputy constable in the discharge of his duty."

Other descriptions of the general state of the town of Manchester in the years 1788 and 1799 respectively will be found in the two Charges to the Jury of the Court Leet delivered in those years by Mr. William Roberts and Mr. John Cross, the then Stewards of the Court. These, which will be found reprinted in the Appendices to this volume, contain much information of interest to those who are concerned with the past history of Manchester.

SIR JOHN PARKER MOSLEY, BART., was the lord of the manor of Manchester at the time when this volume begins, in 1787. He had succeeded his second cousin, the Rev. Sir John Mosley, Bart., in 1779, being at that time simply John Parker Mosley, Esq., but was created a Baronet in 1781. He died at his seat, Rolleston, co. Stafford, on the 29th September, 1798, and was succeeded by his grandson, Oswald Mosley, Esq., born 27th March, 1785, who was then only 13 years of age. He was the eldest son and heir of Oswald Mosley, Esq., of Bolesworth Castle, co. Chester, the eldest son and heir apparent of Sir John Parker Mosley, Bart., who died before his father, in 1789, when only 28 years of age. SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, BART., as he became on his grandfather's death, was still lord of the manor of Manchester when this volume closes in 1805.

George Lloyd, Esq., held the office of Steward of the Court when this volume begins, April, 1787. At the next Court Mr. Richard Tunnadine, who seems for many years to have acted as Deputy Steward, presided; but at the Court held on the 9th April, 1788, William Roberts, Esq., sat for the first time as Steward, and at the following Michaelmas Court, held 15th October, 1788, he delivered a long and important charge to the Jury, which will be found in full in the Appendix. At the Courts held on the 25th April and the 10th October, 1792, Mr. Richard Tunnadine once more presided; but on the 17th April, 1793, William Robert Hay, Esq., acted for the first time as Steward. He was succeeded in 1797 by John Cross, Esq., who sat for the first time on the 27th October in that year, and who was still Steward at the last Court mentioned in this volume. The charge he delivered to the Jury at the Court held 14th October, 1799, will also be found in the Appendix.

As in the previous volumes, the proceedings of each Court have been compared line for line with the original, so as to ensure an exact reproduction in print. It has been found impossible to add many notes, the proceedings being of a very simple and routine character.

The Court Leet or View of Frank Pledge of Sir John Parker Mosley Baronet Lord of the Manor aforesaid holden at Manchester aforesaid the fifteenth day of October in the Twenty eighth Year of the Reign of George the Third over Great Britain and so forth Before William Roberts Esquire Steward of the said Court.[1]

[1] The charge, which Mr. Roberts delivered to the Jury of the Court Leet on this the first Michaelmas Court at which he presided, was afterwards published in a quarto pamphlet, now of rare occurrence, and bearing the following title :—"A Charge to the Grand Jury of the Court Leet, for the Manor of Manchester, by William Roberts, Esq., delivered at the Michaelmas Court on the 15th Oct. 1788. Manchester: Printed by C. Wheeler, M.DCC.LXXXVIII." Quarto, 24pp. On the first two pages is the following address to Mr. Roberts, and his reply :—

"The Foreman of the Grand Jury of the Court Leet for the Manor of Manchester, has the honour to communicate to you the unanimous Vote of Thanks of the Gentlemen of the Jury, for your most excellent Charge delivered to them on Wednesday last; and their request that you will be pleased to favour them with a Copy of the same, with permission to have it printed.

"Manchester, Oct. 17, 1788. To Wm Roberts, Esq., Steward."

To this request Mr. Roberts returned the following reply:—

"The request to permit the following Charge to be published was to me very unexpected; but the polite manner in which it was communicated, by depriving me of the power of refusing, rendered a compliance pardonable, though I felt a consciousness of its many imperfections.

"The summit of my wishes will be gratified, if the animadversions of those who read it, be as favourable as of those to whom I had the honour of addressing it.

"Ardwick. Wm Roberts."

In the opening paragraph of this charge Mr. Roberts refers to his predecessor, George Lloyd, Esq., in very complimentary terms. As this tract is now rare, I hope to be able to reprint it in full in the Appendix to this volume, as an interesting example of the charges delivered to the Juries by the Stewards of the Court. A second edition was published in 1793 as an octavo pamphlet.

No person needs to apply whose Character will not bear the Strictest Enquiry—Application may be made until the day of Election which will be on the 27th of January instant to

John Kay } Deputy Stewards for Manchester 9th Jan. 1797.

N.B.—To prevent any misunderstanding Richard Unite who in an Advertisement in Mr Wheelers Paper of Saturday last called himself "Deputy Constable" has not been appointed to that Office.

The Court met this twenty seventh day of January 1797, in pursuance of the above adjournment.

The Death of the late Mr Thomas Slack the Deputy Constable who was unfortunately drowned at Liverpool executing the Business of this Town[1] having caused a Vacancy in that Office. The Jurors aforenamed do nominate elect and appoint Mr [Blank] Berry to be Deputy Constable in the place of the said Mr Thomas Slack deceased for the year ensuing or until he shall be legally discharged therefrom.

[1] Mr. Thomas Slack was appointed Deputy Constable at the adjourned Court held on the 28th October last past. (See p. 122.) His unfortunate death is thus referred to in a paragraph in the Manchester Mercury, for a copy of which I am indebted to Mr. John Owen, late of Manchester :—

Manchester Mercury, January 10th, 1797.—"Melancholy Accident. On Tuesday a boat with 18 or 20 persons going to the Actæon frigate lying in the River, at Liverpool, was overset; a boat from the frigate immediately put off and took up 5 Men & 3 Women, and brought them ashore of which number 3 of the former & two of the latter were saved by the means recommended by the Humane Society; the remainder were unfortunately not recoverable though every exertion was made for that purpose. The men who were going on board the frigate were volunteers for the Navy. They were in charge of Mr. Slack, late a Grocer in this town at the top of Market St. Lane, who was officiously sent with them; and who we are truly sorry to add is amongst the number of the drowned. The afflicting stroke to a wife and family of four small children totally unprovided for, is, indeed heavy. We are happy however to find, that a public subscription is opened as a means of making some provision for them, and with pleasure we add, it is most liberally patronized. On such an occasion, the alleviating hand cannot be employed to a more benevolent purpose. We are all liable to these visitations and may, therefore all participate with the immediate sufferers."

Mr. Owen also sends me the following copy of Mr. Slack's tombstone, and the entry of his marriage from the Manchester Cathedral Registers. On a gravestone on the south side of St. Mark's Church, Cheetham Hill :—

"In memory of Thomas Slack, who died at Liverpool Janr 5, 1797 Aged 33 years and was interred in St. Pauls Churchyard Liverpool Also Ann Daughter of Thomas and Frances Slack died March 7, 1795 Aged 2 years and 7 Months Also Joseph their Son died March 30, 1795 Aged 13 Months. [1] John Cross, Esq., occurs here for the first time as Steward, in succession to W. R. Hay, Esq. I am not certain whether the charge he delivered to the Jury on this occasion was ever printed or not, but the late Canon Raines was under the impression that it was so, and he made some enquiries about it in 1876, but without success. (See Local Gleanings, vol. j., No. 357.) I have also made enquiries about this charge, but cannot hear of a copy being preserved anywhere. The charge which Mr. Cross delivered to the Jury at the Court held on October 14th, 1799, was printed in the newspapers of that time, and will be found in the Appendix to this volume.

APPENDIX No. I.

Manchester in 1788. Address to the Jury of the Court Leet by William Roberts, Esq^R.

On the 15th October, 1788, William Roberts, Esq., who had succeeded George Lloyd, Esq., as Steward of the Court Leet of the Manor of Manchester, held his first Court, and as was customary delivered an address to the Jury as to their duties and the various matters into which they were bound to inquire. But this being his first address to the Jury, Mr. Roberts seems to have taken more than usual pains with it, and to have drawn up a good historical account of the Court Leet and its powers and duties. This address he no doubt read to the Jury, who appear to have been so pleased with it that they requested him to allow it to be printed, and it accordingly appeared in that year in the form of a large quarto pamphlet of some 23 pages. As this pamphlet is now rarely to be met with, and as it is one of much interest, I have thought it well to reprint it here, as it is the earliest address to any Jury of the Manchester Court Leet which has been preserved. It also furnishes us with a very good picture of the state of affairs in Manchester in 1788, exactly one hundred years ago.

This address appears to have been thought so valuable that it was reprinted five years later in an octavo form with the following title: "A Charge to the Grand Jury of the Court Leet for the Manor of Manchester. Containing an account of the internal government of that town; and of the nature, jurisdiction and duties of Courts Leet in general, Delivered at the Michaelmas Court, on the 15th of October, 1788. By William Roberts, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. The second edition, 'The Law is not dead, though it hath slept' (Shakesp. Measure for Measure). London: Printed by A. Strahan and W. Woodfall, Law-printers to the King's most excellent Majesty; for Whieldon and Butterworth, Fleet Street; and J. Harrop, Manchester. 1793." This octavo pamphlet of 34 pages has the following dedication, which is not in the first edition. "Dedicated to Thomas Johnson, Esq. of Manchester, in testimony of the high respect and esteem in which as a man of honour and probity, of great public and private worth, he is held by the author."

This second edition contains a few corrections and modifications of the original address, and has the advantage of several notes which were added in order to explain some of the allusions in the text. These corrections and notes, &c., I have added as notes to what follows, which is a verbatim reprint of the first edition.

GRAND JURY OF THE COURT LEET,

FOR THE

MANOR OF MANCHESTER,

BY

WILLIAM ROBERTS, ESQ.

DELIVERED AT THE MICHAELMAS COURT,

ON THE 15TH OCT. 1788.

MANCHESTER:
PRINTED BY C. WHEELER.

M.DCC.LXXXVIII.

THE Foreman of the Grand Jury of the Court Leet for the Manor of Manchester, has the honour to communicate to you the unanimous Vote of Thanks of the Gentlemen of the Jury, for your most excellent Charge delivered to them on WEDNESDAY last; and their request that you will be pleased to favour them with a Copy of the same, with permission to have it printed.

Manchester, Oct. 17,

TO WM. ROBERTS, ESQ.
STEWARD.

THE request to permit the following Charge to be published was to me very unexpected; but the polite manner in which it was communicated, by depriving me of the power of refusing, rendered a compliance pardonable, though I felt a consciousness of its many imperfections.

The summit of my wishes will be gratified, if the animadversions of those who read it, be as favourable as of those to whom I had the honour of addressing it.

WM. ROBERTS.

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY,

HAVING had the honour of being appointed Steward of the Court Leet for this Manor, I must, in discharge of the duty reposed in me, earnestly solicit the indulgence of your attention, while I address you in characters that deservedly attract our highest veneration, viz.—the characters of Jurymen.

In the performance of this duty, I shall feel no other diffidence whatever, but that which naturally arises from the recollection of succeeding in this office, a Gentleman* whose zeal for the welfare of the Community in general, must secure to him the estimation of the public, and the qualities of whose heart endear him to all, who have the pleasure of being ranked among the number of his acquaintances.

While you regret a loss that I feel myself incapable of repairing, permit me to hope, that well intended inclinations, together with the regular discharge of the duties annexed to this situation, will in some degree atone for the absence of a Predecessor, who was in every respect better entitled to preside.

Gentlemen, I am not a little apprehensive, that my great desire to have the Constitution and Powers of this Court thoroughly understood, will lead me into a minuteness of investigation, that may weary your attention. Yet, though tedious, your politeness will, I trust, insure your patience, while that wish for every species of information, which characterizes the Gentlemen of this Town, may excuse an address, that cannot be unuseful, though it be unentertaining.

If reverence be due to antiquity, the Court Leet is certainly entitled to it, it having existed for these thousand years, essentially in its present form, though by the interference of the Legislature, and the consuming powers of Time, its authority has suffered a variety of vicissitudes.

When the Heptarchy (consisting of seven independent kingdoms into which this realm was subdivided) was dissolved and swallowed up by the West Saxons, the whole kingdom was united in a monarchy of which Egbert was the founder: his grandson Alfred succeeded to the throne in the year 872, who united in his vast and comprehensive mind, all the qualities both of the Hero and the Legislator. On his accession to the throne, this kingdom was in a most calamitous situation; the perpetual incursions and ravages of the Danes shook the frame of the empire, while the rapine, depredation and murders, perpetrated by vagabonds and vagrants, convulsed its very vitals. Alfred's extraordinary abilities prompted him to attempt the suppression of both those publick, and these private enemies: the former he accomplished by his valour; and the latter by a wonderful exertion of those talents with which he was by Nature endowed.

The kingdom was at that time one vast undivided territory, in which no one part was subordinate to, or dependant on another: in which vagabonds and vagrants, led by a barbarous and uncivilized disposition, might range at large, perpetrate the worst of crimes, and, by changing their habitation, escape with impunity. Alfred saw with sorrow the unhappy situation of his well-disposed subjects, and applied himself in the following manner to secure their future ease and tranquillity. He reduced the whole kingdom into one regular subordination of government. He divided it first into Counties,* those Counties he subdivided into Hundreds, and those Hundreds into Tythings or Towns. A Tything or Town being the smallest subdivision, consisted of no more than ten families, in which each was not only answerable for himself, but for the rest of his neighbours that composed the Tything; and being thus mutually pledges for the good behaviour of each other, they took the name of Frank Pledge, in which one of the principal inhabitants was annually appointed to preside over the rest.

Every inhabitant in England was obliged to belong to some Pledge or Tything; and anciently, in case a stranger came into a Tything, and could not find security for his good behaviour, the Tything threw him into prison, to indemnify themselves, because they would have been answerable for any crime he might commit. This was of the nature of Bail, as it stands at the present day; who, if they suspect the person for whom they are bail, they may surrender him to prison in discharge of themselves.

Ten families thus bound together as sureties for each other, composing a Tything or Town, so ten of these Tythings or Towns bound together in a similar manner, as sureties for each other, constituted a Hundred, and an indeterminate number of these Hundreds constituted a County, all linked together by one great chain that pervaded all parts of the kingdom; every individual inhabitant, and every combination of inhabitants, being under penal obligations to stand pledges of the personal security and property of their fellow citizens and countrymen.*

The beneficial effects that flowed from these wise institutions have been the subjects of admiration and wonder to all succeeding ages; and we are informed by history, that so great were their influence over lawless outrage and depredation, that jewels were exposed with safety on the high-ways—But this great and general security has fallen into disuse, and the only substitute that we now have for it, is the usual one of making suspected persons find particular and special securities for their good conduct.

After having settled and established this admirable division of the kingdom into counties, hundreds, and tythings or towns, he instituted certain Courts suited to these separate divisions, for the regular administration of Justice throughout the realm.

It is impossible to give any accurate account of the administration of public justice in this kingdom, anterior to the reign of Alfred. That variety of nations, the Romans, the Picts, and after them the Saxons and Danes, which invaded and mingled themselves with the Aborigines of this island, the antient Britons, and that variety also of customs which necessarily prevailed in the seven independent kingdoms during the Heptarchy, have created a confused and impenetrable darkness, not to be dispelled by the most learned researches; but when Alfred came to the throne, his mighty genius, like the Sun rising over a chaos, discovered its deformities and disorders, and the dispersion of them, by a wonderful exertion of human powers, resembled him, in a distant and humble degree to that power, which in the beginning said, "let there be light, and there was light."

The view of this great man was to bring Justice home to every one's door, by constituting a variety of courts in all parts of the kingdom; wherein all disputes might be determined, and injuries redressed in an easy and expeditious manner, by the suffrage of neighbours and friends: for this purpose he established the County and the Hundred Courts for all civil causes, and a court called the Sheriff's Torn for criminal ones; and for the use of these several courts he collected the various customs that were dispersed throughout the realm, and digested them into one uniform system, or code of laws, called his Dome-book.

* The phrase retained to this day which one man uses when another is going to drink, "that he will pledge him," was taken from a usage in those days, when the Danes tyrannized in this land; and the meaning of it was to encourage him to drink freely and without fear, for that he would be surety or pledge that nobody did him any bodily harm while he was drinking.

The Court called the Sheriff's Torn, is the Court from which the Court Leet is taken, and is the sole foundation of it: they are both Courts of Record; they have the same jurisdiction over public offences; follow the same mode in their proceedings, and almost every observation that may be made on the one, will equally apply to the other; it will be therefore worthy your attention.

This Court was held before the Sheriff, who formerly made his Turn, Tour, or Perambulation, twice a year in every Hundred throughout the County, for the redress and reformation of all common grievances, and for the preservation of the peace and good government of the kingdom. All the inhabitants of the Hundred, when the Sheriff was presiding in this Court, were obliged to give their attendance, to make enquiry into all offences, to take an oath to be faithful to the King, and also principally to view the Frank-Pledge; which was to see if every inhabitant had incorporated himself in some Tything, which you will recollect consisted of ten families, all of whom were pledges for the good behaviour of each other; and if any one were found not thus incorporated, he was outlawed. This Court, so wisely instituted, preserved in its proper vigour, that arrangement of the kingdom which Alfred had made, and produced the most solid advantages:—offences were rare, and peace and domestic tranquillity firmly established.

There was, however, one inconvenience felt by an attendance on this Court, viz: the trouble and expence of travelling so far from home (as the Hundred was sometimes pretty extensive): to remedy this, it was thought proper to petition the King, to grant Courts of a similar nature to particular great men, to be holden within certain towns or limits, with the same rights that the Sheriffs had in their Torns, only confined to a smaller compass. The King did accordingly grant great numbers of these Courts, and they thence took the name of Courts Leet; the term Leet, being derived from the Saxon word Lite, parvus, Little, a little Court, or a Court with a jurisdiction over a smaller extent of territory;* for the extent of territory is the only difference between a Court Leet and a Sheriff's Torn; the latter extending over the whole Hundred, the former confined to the limits contained in the charter.

Such, Gentlemen of the Jury, was the Origin of Courts Leet, which was two hundred years before any such thing as a Manor was in existence in this kingdom; for the legal idea of a Manor is derived from the feudal subordination which was received throughout the realm from William the Conqueror, who (being no otherways enabled to reward his numerous Norman followers, but by proportioning out among his chiefs those lands which were forfeited by the resistance of our Saxon ancestors) carved out a great number of allotments of territory, which were called Baronies, which he distributed among them, together with the power of holding Courts Baron; and those Chiefs again parcelled out these allotments in small sub-divisions among their inferior followers, who became their Tenants, and held at the will of their Lords, rendering Fealty, Services, &c. and thus was erected that Feudal Fabrick, which, were it necessary to our present purpose here to enlarge upon, I should not, because I am sensible, that your own knowledge, in a matter as much historical as legal, will render it unnecessary.

* By others it is said to be derived from the Saxon leod, plebs, and that it means the populi curia or folk mote. (Note to the second edition.)

These allotments of Lands or Baronies, took the name of Manors, Manerium a Manendo, because they were the usual residence of the Owners or Lords.

These Lords of Manors, in process of time, seeing the great advantages resulting from Courts Leet, in imitation of those who had before the Conquest obtained Grants of them, likewise petitioned the King for these Courts to be holden within the Precincts of their Manors. A great number of Courts Leet were accordingly granted; which Grants vested in the Lords the same powers in the Leet that the Sheriff's had in the Torn: and hence it is observable, that a Court Leet is not an essential of a Manor, but is merely an incident to it, being very different from a Court Baron, which is a Court essential to a Manor, neither of which can exist without the other; and the moment that a Manor was granted to any subject by the Crown, that moment a Court Baron for settling disputes of property, and redressing misdemeanors among the tenants, was, without any express words for that purpose, also created; the grant of the one necessarily including the grant of the other. The Court Baron is stiled the Lord's Court; but the Court Leet is stiled the King's Court, it being for the preservation of the publick peace within the precincts described by the Charter; the Grantee or the Lord being entitled to the produce of certain Fines and Amercements, as a Compensation for the trouble and expence of obtaining and supporting the Court. From all which an obvious observation or two occur, which, it is much to be lamented that some unhappy circumstances of disagreement concerning the customs of this Manor, render in some degree necessary to be mentioned, viz.—that (on whichever side the Scales of Justice preponderate in that disagreement) the Court Leet and its duties are totally distinct from, and unconnected with it; and that this Court, even in the most coercive extension of its cognizance over all the objects of its jurisdiction, can in no way whatever violate or preserve, diminish or increase the private Rights which are inherent in the Lord, or the Privileges that appertain to the inhabitants of the Manor—That the Steward presiding in this Court, who in that character should attempt to investigate these Manerial Rights, or those Municipal Priviledges, would be guilty of a strange and an unpardonable deviation from the line of his duty; and that the Officers of the Town, or the Jurors themselves, who, in the discharge of their respective Offices, should be in the least degree biassed by prepossessions for or against the private interests of the Lord, or the private interests of the Town, would be as strangely and as unpardonably forgetful of their oaths. This Court is solely intended for the publick good, and cannot be rendered subservient to any private purpose whatever, without Corruption, without Perjury, or without Injustice.

I have not traced the Origin of the Court Leet, and described the advantages that flowed from viewing the Frank Pledge—of which advantages our own neglect has been one of the principal causes that we are now deprived. Yet, Gentlemen of the Jury, it does not by any means follow, that because we have suffered the hand of Time imperceptibly to steal from us a part of these benefits, that we should therefore be content to relinquish the whole. For my part, I should think it a cause of regret to every inhabitant in Manchester, concerned in its dignity or its welfare, that any institution whatever, wherein a legal and constitutional power exists of regulating the police of the town, should be considered as mere matter of idle festivity and parade, and of useless veneration for antient usages.

It is certain that the Judicial Polity of this kingdom has undergone a great variety of changes, and is very different from what it formerly was. The extirpation of useless and oppressive Tribunals; the erection of new ones; the abridgment of the powers of some, and the enlargement of the powers of others, have gradually brought our legal Constitution to that degree of excellence, that nothing is wanted but the suggestions and exertions of a few years more, to bring it to as much perfection as human association is capable of receiving. There is, however, one striking observation, that will attend all our contemplations on the ruins of our ancient Tribunals—that there was scarcely a single pillar that supported what was really useful, but continues to this day mingled with, and adding a grandeur to our modern legal superstructure. As one of those ancient and venerable columns I consider a Court Leet, which still retains in its constitution a number of profitable powers, that have become sluggish and inactive, because they have been suffered to lie neglected and disregarded.

Another cause of this Court's falling into disuse, besides our own neglect* was the establishment of the Courts of Session, held before Justices of Peace, upon whom a principal part of the business of the Court Leet has devolved.—But, Gentlemen, permit me to remind you, that a Town increasing as this is in Opulence, in Populousness, and in Importance, requires the exertion of every nerve it possesses, to combat against the prevalence and contagion of Licentiousness, Irregularity, and Disorder; and although the due, impartial, and regular administration of Justice, so conspicious in the Courts of Sessions in this town, obviates the necessity of this Court's taking cognizance of a number of offences, over which it has a concurrent jurisdiction; yet it is certain, that a great variety of the more minute offences which I shall presently enumerate to you, and which are extremely detrimental to the public, escape unnoticed, and unpunished; because the trouble, the expence, and the anxiety of prosecuting in Courts less summary than this, deter many from doing justice to the public by a public prosecution.

A Court thus venerable for its antiquity; exciting wonder at the advantages that it bestowed on our ancestors; retaining still, in some measure, the powers it then possessed, and now administering Justice without Expence!†—Such a Court, it must, I should think, be the wish of every good Citizen to cherish and to support: for my part, I am strongly persuaded, that by a full and regular exercise of all its functions, it might contribute greatly towards the establishment of domestic security and good order.

I shall now proceed to enumerate‡ the principal Offences over which this Court has jurisdiction, and to which it is your duty as Jurors to extend your notice; premising first, that the mode of proceeding in this Court is so very summary, (it not allowing the party accused even to traverse or deny the charge) that you should be perfectly convinced of the commission of an offence, before you presented it: however, though the Presentment is conclusive, without hearing the party, yet as it is so contrary to the genius of the English Laws, that any one should receive a judicial sentence unheard, I shall always take care, that every person shall have an opportunity

* At this point there is added in the text of the second edition "is, that it is seldom held more than twice in the year, though it may certainly be kept open as required by adjournment. A further cause" was the establishment, &c.

† Here is added in the text of the second edition "and by the intervention of a Jury, so much more congenial to English Jurisprudence than summary convictions before Justices."

‡ This paragraph is altered in the second edition to read as follows: "those offences which, in the present state of the general administration of public justice, seem more particularly to deserve the attention of this Court, and to which it is your duty as Jurors to extend your notice," &c.

of saying what he can in his own behalf.* The only power that this Court has of enforcing its determinations is by Fine and Amercement, that is, a pecuniary penalty upon the offender; it having no authority to imprison, or to inflict any corporal punishment whatever. To all those offences then that shall come before you, you will honestly, and conscientiously impose such an amercement, or penalty, as is proportioned to the offence.† In the first place then, every Resident in this town,‡ above twelve years of age, parsons, women, and a few others excepted, owes suit to this Court for the purposes that required an attendance on the Sheriff's Torn, as before stated; and those that do not attend, it will be your duty to [altered in the second edition to, "you may at your pleasure"] present and amerce. §

The Constables, and all the Officers who have served the last year, and who will be now discharged, and new ones appointed in their stead, are subject to your inspection; and if they, or any of them, have been neglectful of their respective duties, they ought to be presented by you; so that if they can get over the obligations of

* This note appears in the second edition. "If, however, the presentment affect the party's freehold, as if to charge him with not repairing such a highway, which he is bound to repair by the tenure of his land, he may remove it into the Court of King's Bench, and traverse or deny it."

† This paragraph is omitted in the second edition.

‡ In the second edition this reads thus: "In the first place then every person, of whatever description, who hath resided within the Leet a year and a day, and who is above twelve years of age, except peers, prelates, clerks, women, and aliens, owes suit" &c. And this note is added, "A man cannot be compelled to attendance in two Leets, and therefore a resident in a private Leet may refuse to do suit to the Sheriff's Torn or to any Grand Leet. Thus, for instance, the residents in the Manchester Leet are not obliged to attend the Salford Leet as Jurymen or otherwise and vice versa."

§ This amercement for non-attendance is usually three-pence; which is collected by the bailiffs, and the goods of the party refusing to pay may be distrained. The form of the amercement is always read in Court, and the Jury assent to it as a matter of course. The constant exercise of this branch of jurisdiction bears hard on the poor, who, to avoid the payment of the three-pence, attend the Court and listen to the calling over an immense roll of names, until they answer to their own, by which the greatest part of the day is lost, to no purpose whatever. The original causes of this general assemblage of the people were, 1st To view the frank-pledges, and to see if every inhabitant had incorporated himself in some tything. 2dly, To make inquiry into all offences; and lastly To take an oath to be faithful to the king. The first of these does not now exist; the second requires only the attendance of the Steward, the Jury and complainants; the last only affords any foundation for this general suit to the Court, but is never attended to; though in times of disaffection, it might be worthy of consideration, how far it might be proper to put this power of the Court into execution. As to the common practice of calling over all the names of so populous a Manor as Manchester, it occasions loss of time to the poor, is productive of no advantage, no emolument but a trifling perquisite to the inferior officers of the Court, and the liberality of the present Lord of the Manor (Sir John Parker Mosley) would induce him to correct this practice.

Honour and Conscience to discharge their duties, they may be induced to the performance of them by the controul you have over them.

The powers of this Court over public nuisances of all kinds, give you an opportunity, by a strict and regular exertion of them, of rendering the Town very essential services.—The punishment of public nuisances by Indictment at the Quarter Sessions, is so troublesome and expensive, that it is not frequently attempted; but you, Gentlemen, have nothing to do but to be satisfied that the offence has been committed, and to present the offender: you should, therefore, have a particular regard to everything that renders the enjoyment of life and property so uncomfortable, as to constitute a public nuisance; that is, such as is noxious to all the people about the neighbourhood, or that may be passing that way; for if it affect only a few individuals, it is then not a public, but a private nuisance, over which this Court has no jurisdiction. Of these public nuisances, the following at present seem to demand your particular attention; viz. The laying Timber, Dunghills, or other things in the public streets; or letting Carts stand in the streets, or at doors, longer than is necessary for loading or unloading, which obstruct the passages, or render them inconvenient; also suffering Swine to stray about the streets, which is not only a filthy, but often a dangerous nuisance, as these animals will sometimes attack and destroy children: the owners of them therefore should be severely amerced.

The public security and convenience call loudly also for your attention to the great numbers of uncovered Cellar Holes about the town: every nuisance of this kind, is a serious injury to the public: no passenger can walk in the night without the danger of dislocating his limbs, by falling into them: every man should so enjoy his own property, as not to be dangerous or hurtful to others; it is therefore idle for these people to say, "It is their own Property," for the public hath a right of safe passage through all the streets of the town, which cannot be enjoyed when there are so many Pitfals to be met with in all parts of it.—I hope, therefore, you will redress this injury, by presenting every Cellar Hole that extends to the Footway, and is not properly guarded.

Also, any Incroachment on the common Streets, by building on, inclosing, or taking in a part, and endeavouring to make that private which ought to be public, is an offence called Purpresture, of which you ought to take notice. In a word, all nuisances* whatever,

* In the second edition this paragraph reads thus: "all nuisances and offences against public œconomy it is your duty to present: among these the following may be enumerated: All obstructions, stoppages, restrictions, straightenings, or diversions of the highway, or any watercourse, all walls, houses, gates, causeways, ditches, pools or pits, raised, prostrated or made upon or near the common highway, to the nuisance of the way, and the dangers of passengers, defective bridges and causeways; ditches not scoured; removing bounds and landmarks; offensive trades and manufactures; public gaming houses," &c.

throughout the Town, it is your duty to present. All public Gaming-houses, Houses of Ill Fame, and other disorderly places,* Inn-keepers, Alehouse-keepers, or others, who harbour suspected persons, and do not keep good order in their houses. Such places as these must certainly be the receptacles of the perpetrators of those late frequent and outrageous attacks on the persons and property of his Majesty's peaceable subjects, and deserve to be inspected into with a suspicious care and caution.

For the sake of the health of the public, you should be particularly attentive† to prevent the selling, or the exposing to sale, corrupt or unwholesome victuals: this is an offence, which, it is to be feared, is frequently committed in these markets, and ought to be as frequently punished.

There are a variety of other offences, which it might be tedious particularly to enumerate—such as the offences of breaking the assize of bread, beer, and ale; keeping false weights and measures; defective bridges, causeways and highways; the offences of common scolding, brawling, barratry, eaves-dropping, and in short, all who are guilty of a common disturbance of the peace.‡ There are, however, some other offences, which very materially affect the trade of the town, and the price of provisions in the markets; which, in the language of the law, are called the offences of Forestalling, Regrating, and Ingrossing, and of which it may be useful to remind you.

Forestalling, is the buying or contracting for any merchandize or victual, coming in the way to market; or dissuading persons from bringing their goods there; or persuading them to enhance the price when there; any of which practices make the market dearer to the fair trader.

Regrating, is the buying of corn, or other dead victual, in any market, and selling it again in the same market, or within four miles of the place, for this also enhances the price of provisions, as every successive seller must have a successive profit.

* Here is added in the second edition, "cock-fighting or keeping a common cock-pit; drunkenness, or continued drinking and tippling, or publicans suffering others to do so." This takes the place of the two paragraphs commencing "Innkeepers" and ending with "caution," which are entirely omitted.

† This paragraph in the second edition is thus altered: "attentive to those offences which tend to corrupt it; viz. butchers, fishmongers, cooks, victuallers or bakers, selling corrupt, spoiled or unwholesome meat, fish, victuals or bread. Brewers, vintners or others brewing or selling spoiled or unwholesome wine ale or other drink and the making of impure or unseasonable malt."

‡ This paragraph is omitted here in the second edition, but is inserted further on in different words; and the next paragraph is rather differently worded, but the sense remains the same.

Engrossing, is the getting into ones possession, or buying up of corn, or other dead victuals, with intent to sell them again. This is injurious to the public, by putting it in the power of one or two rich men, to raise the price of provisions at their own discretion.

[In the second edition the following paragraphs are here inserted :—

The breaking or not observing the assize of bread,* ale, cloths, weights, or measures; the using or keeping of false balances, weights, or measures; tapsters or tiplers, that is, vintners and others, who retail drink, selling by cups or measures not lawfully sealed.† The putting to sale of malt not sufficiently trodden, rubbed, and fanned; innholders making horse-bread, hay, oats, &c. or any kind of victual, either for man or beast, for unreasonable gain; butchers, fishmongers, and others, selling victuals at unreasonable prices; the conspiring of butchers, brewers, bakers, cooks, costermongers, or fruiterers, not to sell their victuals but at certain prices, or of artificers, workmen, or labourers, not to make or do their work but at certain prices, or not to finish what another has begun, or not to work but at certain hours or times; the buying of raw hides by any but tanners; the making for sale, or uttering of deceitful wares; and lastly, butchers gashing hides or killing calves to sell under five weeks old.

There are other offences against public justice under the conusance of this Court, and which it should be your care to prevent. Such are Theft-bote; that is, the receiving by any one, of his goods when stolen, or the taking of other amends not to prosecute the thief; Forestalls, that is, the rescuing of beasts distrained, in their way to the pound; Poundbreach, or the breaking of the common pound, and taking any distress thereout; Barratry, that is, the exciting and stirring up of suits and quarrels between his Majesty's subjects, either at law or otherwise; Maintenance, or the officiously stirring up or interfering in quarrels for suits, or the maintaining or assisting of either party with money or otherwise, to prosecute or defend; Champerty, or the unlawful maintenance of a suit, in consideration that the champerter shall have part of the lands, or things in dispute or part of the gains; the Buying of doubtful or disputed titles to

* The assize of Bread under 3 Geo. III. is not within the jurisdiction of this Court.

† This, it has been observed, is alluded to by Shakespeare :—

"Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;
And rail upon the hostess of the house;
And say, you would present her at the leet,
Because she brought stone jugs, and no seal'd quarts."

Taming of the Shrew, Act 1, Scene lands; lastly, Extortion, or the unlawful taking, by colour of one's office, of money, or any thing of value not due to him, or more than his due, or before it is due. As to disturbing the administration of justice, by a direct contempt offered to the Court, this is an offence which it is in the power of the Steward himself to punish by an imprisoning, or by imposing an immediate fine on the offender; an authority indispensably requisite for the proper support of the Court.

The last species of offences which I shall notice, are those which affect the public peace; such are the now-disregarded offences of common scolding of women, brawling, hue and cry raised without cause, the spreading of false news to make discord between the King and the nobility; and challenging another to fight.

Thus, Gentlemen, I have stated to you as concisely as possible the principal offences which this Court has the power to correct; and you are to consult among yourselves what degree of punishment they respectively deserve, when you are properly acquainted thereof, either by the oath of the informer, or by your own inspection and knowledge. From a view of this catalogue of offences, all which are under the Jurisdiction of this Court, it must be obvious, that if its powers were once put in motion, and if the inhabitants of Manchester could see the great extent of its utility, it would remain no longer in the inactive state into which it has fallen.]

You are therefore, Gentlemen, to consult among yourselves, how far all, or any of these offences, if they come to your knowledge, deserve to be punished. It is certain, that if the powers of this Court were once put in motion, and the Inhabitants of Manchester could see of what utility it might be, it would remain no longer in the inactive state into which it has fallen.*

Having thus, Gentlemen, ingrossed so much of your attention in considering this Court as one of the Guardians which our Constitution has placed over our domestic comfort and happiness, I will now request your attention to the business which particularly demands your notice to day, viz., that of electing Officers for the inspection, controul, and regulation of the different branches of the Police of this town.

The first and principal Magistrate, or Officer for this town, is the Borough-reeve, a name undoubtedly of great antiquity, being nearly coeval with the first institution of Courts Leet. This Officer was originally appointed to preside over the Frank Pledges, to act and to speak for them, and to take care that no strangers of suspicious characters crept in among them, who might commit crimes, and leave them to be answerable. Over a single Frank Pledge, or Tything, consisting only of ten families, the principal Officer was called the Handborough, or Tythingman, an inferior pledge or security; but over ten of these Frank Pledges, or the Hundred, a High Constable was chosen to preside over the whole.

In process of time, and for the ease of the people, as I have before described, on the petitions of a variety of great men, the Kings of this realm granted Courts Leet, to be held in certain districts, wherein the Grantee, or Lord, was to exercise the same powers that the Sheriff exercised in the Hundred, in chusing Constables and other Officers—now as these districts contained a number of Tythings, the chief of each of which was called the Handborough, or Tythingman; so the chief over all these in the nature of the High Constable over the Hundred, was called the Headborough, and in some counties Borough's-ealder, or Borsholder; or, as we call him, Borough-reeve, which seem to be synonimous appellations; so that, in my apprehension, the office of Borough-reeve within the precincts of a Court Leet, is exactly similar to that of the High Constable in a Hundred, and possesses all the powers of a High Constable, except those which are given to him by Statutes, in which the Headboroughs, or Borough-reeves, are not expressly included.

It is certain, that these powers of a Borough-reeve are not exercised in this Manor; and it is not worthy of a serious consideration, how far it might be useful to revive them, since all this business is, or ought to be, transacted by the Constables. Notwithstanding, however, the original and legal authority* of the Borough-reeve has been suffered to lie dormant; yet time, and long continued respect, hath stamped the office with a kind of prescriptive veneration, which is highly becoming the dignity of the first Officer of so large and so opulent a town. The Borough-reeve therefore is to be considered as the representative, and the center of union of the town, upon all important and public occasions; and the moment that he is invested with his Office, whatever were his private sentiments, or his private interests; whatever contested scheme he had in view; whatever party he was engaged by affection or otherwise to promote—to be upright, to be impartial, and to be worthy of his office, he should beware of using his weight in a public capacity, as an influence in any way whatever, except for the public good.

* An idea has prevailed, that in case of differences between the Lord and the Inhabitants of the Manor, the Borough-reeve possessed the power of an Umpire, or common friend to determine them; this power most certainly was not a part of the original Constitution of the office of Borough-reeve; and if it ever was vested in this Officer, it must have been by virtue of an Act of Parliament, or by virtue of a Royal Charter, obtained by the mutual consent of the Lord and the Inhabitants; or by a solemn compact, legally entered into by both parties, none of which, as far as I can understand, ever existed—the idea therefore is unfounded. The existence of an amicable composer of disputes, suggests a most pleasing reflection; but surely it is not consonant to a reasonable mode of thinking, to believe, or even to wish that the scales of decision should be lifted by the hand of one, who from his interests and his connections in the town, would find it so difficult to be impartial. The only power then to which the really injured can appeal, is to the laws of the country, by which alone the boundary between oppression on the one hand, and incroachment on the other, can be permanently established. It is much to be apprehended, that the natural and laudable love of Freedom, sometimes excites in us a hatred of every kind of authority whatever; and although it must be acknowledged that the manerial rights inherent in the Lord, are badges of the ancient servitude of the Tenants, the severity of which has been relaxed by the indulgencies of compliant Lords, rather than by legislative or judicial exertions in favour of Liberty; yet these rights, inconvenient and humbling as they may be, are sanctioned by the Laws, and no good Citizen would have recourse to illegal means of abridging them.

The two next, and principal Officers of the Town, which you are this day to appoint, are the two Constables—This is an ancient office, that derives great respectability from the very extensive powers which the laws have entrusted to it, and which is diminished only by the practice of reposing these powers in low and contemptible hands. The Constables have a very large authority in preserving good order and regularity; they have the power of arresting, imprisoning, and breaking open houses in all cases of disturbance, or wherein the King's peace is broken; together with a great variety of other powers, which are now too generally known to need enumeration; one however, it may not be improper to mention, viz., that of appointing the Watch within their jurisdiction, and of seeing that it is well kept.—The strict exercise of this power, cannot be too strongly recommended to them; when your houses, your property, and your persons, are nightly exposed to the mercy of villains, that are hourly increasing in number and in boldness.

There are a great variety of other Officers that you are to appoint,† and in your election of them, I trust you will be biassed by no other consideration whatever, but how well they are qualified to execute

The franchise of a Manor, together with its dignities, priviledges, liberties, emoluments, &c., is as much the subject of property in the Lord, as a landed estate can be; and consequently any secret, concerted, or combined efforts to destroy, or to diminish this property, are in conscience as inequitable, and in law as illegal, as an attempt to deprive any individual of what justly belongs to him. If the emoluments received by the Lord are not sufficiently ascertained; if the priviledges exercised by him have become incommodious; if the situation of the antient markets has, by the increasing populousness of the town, become inconvenient; or if any other source of altercation exist, these might be happily terminated by an Act of Parliament, drawn up with an accommodating spirit, and at a reciprocal expence, which would be trifling, when compared to the expence of a variety of law suits, that may otherwise ensue: or lastly, the very roots of dissension might be totally destroyed by the town's purchasing their own Freedom from Manerial Dominion.

their several offices. Many of these offices have an appearance of throwing a degree of indignity on the possessors, and it not unfrequently happens that the muscles of the gravest are relaxed, when they hear of the most respectable names being annexed to the offices of Scavengers, Market-Lookers, and Muzzlers of Mastiff Dogs; but the chearfulness and alacrity with which Gentlemen are annually invested with these offices, render every observation superfluous, except an earnest recommendation to them, to be as serviceable as possible to their fellow Citizens, by an active performance of their respective duties: these duties are extremely easy—for instance, an Officer, whenever he is witness to any of the offences, over which he is appointed to inspect: as if a Scavenger see any person obstructing the streets in any manner whatever; or if a Market Looker find any unwholesome meat exposed to sale, and so of all the rest of the Officers, he has nothing to do but to make a memorandum of the offender's name, and the time of committing the offence, and to give information thereof at the next Court Leet, and the offender will be amerced;* by which plain and simple means, if steadily pursued, regularity and good conduct would be enforced, without expence, to the ease, health, and security of the inhabitants of the town.

I am sure, Gentlemen of the Jury, that it would be insulting your understandings to take up your time in enlarging on the advantages of subordination in civil society. It is sufficient to say that it is the sine qua non of its existence—it is the soul, source, and support of it. It is certain that every individual member of the community is bound to support the welfare of the whole: we are under a religious obligation to do this, because the establishment of human society was evidently the intention of our Creator, in giving us faculties so exactly adapted to that situation; we are under a moral obligation to do this, because it would be ingratitude to neglect that from which we derive so many and such great advantages. But since among mankind we observe so few whose actions flow from such sentiments, it is not only necessary that men know the dues that belong to Society, but Society should also take care that those dues be paid. And for this purpose our legal Constitution has wisely provided, that in all, as well in the least, as in the most extensive divisions of the Empire, publick Officers, both ministerial and judicial, are so disposed, that nothing else is wanting but the vigilant and active performance of the trusts reposed in them, to suppress the disorders and irregularities that disturb the publick tranquillity.

* This Amercement or pecuniary penalty, which is no otherwise limited, than by the merciful discretion of the Jury, is to be levied, under a warrant of distress, upon the offender's goods, which will in future be strictly executed. In the second edition this note reads thus: "This Amercement or pecuniary penalty is in the first place fixed by the Jury, but may be moderated by certain officers called Affeerors, who are always specially chosen and sworn for this purpose."

When any man is thus entrusted with an office, he ought to consider himself as one of the Guardians of the Repose of his Fellow-Citizens: by being inattentive to the duties of such office, he violates one of the most important of civil obligations, and I think it may be truly observed, that next to the perpetration of an offence is the guilt of him who might have prevented it, had he attended to his duty.

These Observations tend to shew the necessity of appointing such Officers only who from their good sense, and their respectability, derive their title to preside over the Town, and from their integrity, activity, and regard for its welfare, their title to officiate in those various departments, to which you have the power of appointment.

These only, Gentlemen, are the considerations that should weigh in your choice of Officers; for if any party motives whatever, either of Religion, Politicks, or of Trade, bias your election, you are forgetful of the sacred obligation you are under of acting only for the publick welfare, and not from private inclination. The Legislature, even in the midst of the zeal that produced the Corporation and Test Acts, in the reign of Charles II by the latter of which it is enacted that all officers, civil and military, should receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the usage of the Church of England —in the midst of that zeal, I say, the Parliament enacted that this should not extend to Constables, Head-boroughs, or Tything-men, who may enter into these Offices, and execute them, without that qualification. As these Officers were then expressly excepted, it is not easy to conceive that in this age of mildness and philanthrophy* [sic] you will be influenced by a spirit which the Legislature formally rejected, even at at [sic] a time when the rage against Non-conformists rose to enthusiasm.

It is of no publick consideration whatever, what religious persuasion the Boroughreeve, the Constables, or other Officers hold—all we want, and all that are necessary, are sensible, respectable, steady, upright, active Officers.† This Town is happily freed from the feuds, the riots, and the tumults of Corporation Towns—should it then be solicitous to create new sources of contention, to disturb its own tranquillity?—In short, Gentlemen of the Jury, I, who am a

* In the second edition the words "of mildness and philanthrophy" are omitted.

† In the second edition is added here, "men who testify an affectionate loyalty to the King, a veneration for the Constitution and a proper sense of the blessings which flow from them; without which no man ought to be invested with any public trust whatever."

Churchman, do not hesitate to say,* that it would be manly, it would be rational, to go hand in hand in promoting the publick Welfare; to lay aside contracted prejudices, and, by so doing, to free ourselves from the guilt of converting the fountain of our union with God, into a source of disunion with Man.

I have now finished all I have to say, and I return you my sincere thanks for the very polite attention with which you have honoured me.

APPENDIX No. II.

MANCHESTER IN 1799.—CHARGE TO THE JURY OF THE COURT LEET BY JOHN CROSS, ESQ.

IN the previous Appendix the address to the Jury of the Court Leet delivered by Mr. William Roberts on the 15th October, 1788, has been printed, and in this Appendix will be found the address delivered some eleven years later by Mr. John Cross, the then Steward. This address, unlike the previous one, has not been copied from a pamphlet, but has been taken from one of the Manchester newspapers of that date, in which it was printed in full. This newspaper cutting in my possession is, I find, not from the Harrop's Manchester Mercury, and therefore it is most probably from Wheeler's Manchester Chronicle. It is an interesting document, and contains many particulars relating to Manchester at the close of the last century. It is headed as follows:

The CHARGE of JOHN CROSS, ESQ. Steward of the Court Leet for the Manor of Manchester, delivered at the Court House on the 14th of October last; which is published by the Permission of the Steward, and at the Request of the Jury, composed of the following Gentlemen:

John Kearsley, Esq. Foreman.

Mr Thomas Boardman	Mr Chas. Frederick Brandt
Mr John Tetlow	Mr Thomas Potter
Mr James Bateman	Mr Ashworth Clegg
Mr John Littledale	Mr Thomas Dunnington
Mr Thomas Yates	Mr Richard Potter
Mr Thomas Fosbrooke	Mr John Varley
Mr Thomas Drinkwater	Mr William Rawlinson
Mr John Entwisle	Mr William Gleave
Mr William Douglas	Mr William Cooper

Gentlemen of the Jury,

We are assembled here, according to the ancient and annual custom of this place, for the purpose of attending to the interior order and œconomy of the town, and appointing the usual officers for its superintendance; objects that yearly grow in magnitude and importance, proportioned to the rapid and continual increase of your population.

We should all, undoubtedly, best consult our immediate personal ease and convenience on this occasion, by a supine and merely formal discharge of our respective duties; in conformity to the indifference that too generally prevails towards them.

But I have the pleasure to see among you, Gentlemen, many with far other dispositions, who observe this apathy with infinite concern, and ardently look forward to some change in this respect in the general sentiments; sensible they cannot be employed more beneficially even for themselves, than in these public services, which are next in degree to their private and domestic concerns, and second in the scale of social duties.

By their presence I am encouraged to hope, that if I earnestly exhort you to turn your serious thoughts to these subjects, and if for this purpose I dilate somewhat at large, I shall not incur the reproach of wasting your time and attention upon unworthy objects. Nothing can be further from my present intention than to insinuate that there is among you, Gentlemen, or in the Town in general, a deficiency of public spirit. On the contrary I believe there is not a town, city, or community of any description in the British Empire, animated with a more ardent and generous zeal for the public welfare.

Your many charitable institutions, largely and liberally endowed by voluntary donations, managed with admirable order and regularity by the spontaneous diligence of benevolent and well-disposed individuals, are living proofs that your cares are not wholly confined to private and selfish interests.

The manly, patriotic, and devoted support you have supplied to the Country during the present war; a thousand marines furnished at your own expence to the national strength; the large share you bore of the county subscriptions; the vast amount of your voluntary aid, contributed in the last year to the exigencies of the State; two thousand gallant volunteers, armed, disciplined, and embodied for the defence of the laws and rational liberties of your country, are memorable and convincing testimonies of the public spirit that prevails in Manchester and Salford.

But it has happened here, as it sometimes does with all the best dispositions of the mind, that the public spirit has not embraced every object that lies naturally within the scope of it; accordingly the affairs of local polity, which form the business of this day, have not of late attracted their due share of attention; except indeed it is to regret, as we all do, how much, and how shamefully they have been neglected.

Gentlemen, in this state of the public mind, I do not know that I can discharge a more useful duty in my station, than by endeavouring to awaken your attention to the indispensible necessity of earnestly taking up this business, and by humbly submitting to you the poor opinions I have formed upon it.

Gentlemen, you recollect about seven years ago, I think in the year 1792, this necessity was felt with more than ordinary sensibility. Great exertions were made on that occasion, which, it is much to be regretted, have been since most unhappily relaxed. It was then thought that legal powers, and pecuniary resources, were wanting; and accordingly an act of parliament was obtained, amply, though ineffectually providing both. By this act a body politic and corporate is created, with perpetual succession, consisting of a very numerous description of the inhabitants who are appointed commissioners for carrying the act into execution. It contains, with some exceptions, many salutary provisions for the lighting, the cleansing, the watching, and the widening and improving the streets of these two populous towns.

For the purpose of widening and improving, the commissioners are empowered to remove houses and purchase lands, for laying the streets open where they are contracted and incommodious—It provides for the effectual removal of annoyances; for the establishment of stands of public carriages; for the erection of party walls between contiguous houses; for the appointment of the necessary officers with salaries; for the summary punishment of all who offend against the regulations of the act; and lastly, for raising a fund by assessment amply adequate to all these purposes.

Now, Gentlemen, let us consider a little what has happened since the erection of this new constitution of local government. During many wet and dark winter months, the streets have remained uncleansed and without lights; for some time no watchmen or patroles were appointed—Security and temptation were thus afforded to plunder: and none could pass through the streets in safety—Escaping personal violence, they were still in imminent personal danger, from the numerous unguarded cellars, pits, and various obstructions that every where interrupted their passage. While your affairs remained in this deplorable state of confusion and disorder, burglaries were nightly committed; many of the perpetrators escaped; while those less successful in their depredations crouded all the gaols of the county—Fortunately, we may say, this was a state of things too desperate to be of long continuance; and accordingly, considerable amelioration in these respects has lately taken place, upon which I shall beg leave, by and by, to observe more particularly.

As yet, however, though innumerable buildings are every where rising up and crouded together, I am informed no party walls have been erected, than which nothing can so effectually prevent the ravages of a general conflagration, which at some time for want of this precaution, so much attended to in London and other great cities, may lay entire streets in ashes. At this time not a single carriage is ever seen upon the public stands; the streets are still crouded with annoyances, which the powers of the new act were calculated to remove; offenders are every where encouraged by the impunity with which their trespasses are committed. Not a street has been widened or laid open; not one yard of land has been yet laid into them, for any of the proposed purposes of improvement; on the contrary, in many of the places by the act expressly designated to that end, we have seen recently erected spacious and substantial buildings.

Such has been hitherto the fate of this well-designed project of improvement—Thus impotent and vain are all the powers the Legislature can bestow: futile and unavailing the best system of regulations that human ingenuity can devise: alike useless and unwieldy every body politic or physical, unanimated by the voluntary exertions of those to whom are committed the management and direction of their powers. This is the vital principle which alone can give active energy and effect to any system.

Gentlemen, persons of popular weight and character have, for the most part, withheld their assistance from this, and from every other course of public improvement; and from that cause alone it has happened, your public local concerns have not been well administered; and this circumstance, with strangers ignorant of the meritorious and munificent acts of public spirit for which you are so eminently distinguished, has subjected you, very undeservedly, to the reproach of a deficiency in that particular; and it is much to be feared, nothing can effectually prevent the further imputation of inhospitality, incivilization, and a selfish parsimony, but a removal of all these appearances that furnish occasion to it.

Some of these objects lie out of the reach of your present jurisdiction; but as you are all commissioners of the police, and are now at once possessed of the powers conferred by the Act of Parliament, and invested with the functions of a jury of this Court, a more favourable occasion cannot present itself for an attentive and effectual consideration of the whole. It is with you to avert these mortifying reproaches, and to provide for yourselves, for your families, and all who resort to this place, the many external comforts and conveniences which are here so much wanted.

It must be admitted, however, much improvement has lately taken place in the general aspect of the town; to which I have already slightly adverted—A few respectable and active persons have directed their attention to these public concerns. But much yet remains to be done, and they will again relapse into disorder, unless some plan is pursued with uniformity and perseverance, by persons whose names and attendance will give a credit to the employment that may induce others of less influence and more activity, to engage in it.

Gentlemen, I am aware that in this kind of public service, there is nothing splendid; nothing that can invite or gratify ambition; nor is it often followed by the applause or approbation of those who derive advantage from it. For these and other reasons the subject is irksome to most men. They feel a repugnance in directing their thoughts to it; and unwilling to be persuaded of the natural and urgent obligation to discharge these duties, they catch at the most frivolous pretences for exemption—Persons engaged in military service conceive that to employ as much of their time, as the public is entitled to expect or require. If such service were deemed a commutation for all civil duties, highly useful and meritorious as it is, that would be a bargain less to the advantage of the public, than to the individuals with whom such terms are made.

Legally speaking, the volunteer service confers no exemption from civil offices.

Gentlemen, let us not persuade ourselves that this is no time for providing public accommodations; that money and means of every kind are wanting, and that all improvement must be deferred to a more convenient season. These objections might prevail, were we treating of works of public decoration and magnificence, such as adorn many other places less opulent than this; of grand and expensive columns to perpetuate the memory of signal victories; of monuments to departed heroes; of splendid theatres; of halls and chambers of public assembly—Yet even for these, Manchester is not without the means of providing, if the taste of the present, as of former times, were turned to such objects—But it is of works of cleanliness, convenience, and utility only that we are treating, and for such works no time can be unseasonable. Many of you, Gentlemen, I dare say, have seen the very extensive improvements that are at present carrying on in the Metropolis, at Temple Bar, and in other places; and have heard of the grand schemes for the formation of new docks, which no difficulties of the times have deterred the spirited citizens of London from projecting and bringing forward for immediate execution. Here is an example worthy of imitation, which it is hoped will not be without its effect in this place.

It is very generally, but erroneously supposed, that the rich corporations, of which there are many in the kingdom, possess an advantage in their revenues, which no expedients can supply to the town of Manchester—but let it be recollected those revenues are all derived from local taxation or from sources for the most part similar in their nature and effect; and those who are aware of the facility with which a law has been obtained for raising a public fund, in this place, by a general rate, will perceive that those corporations, in this respect, are not possessed of any real advantage, that is not attainable here by a little trouble and attention.

Gentlemen, these observations, which you have honored with so obliging a hearing, will not have been altogether useless, if they tend in the least degree to promote that vigorous, combined, and unremitting energy, which alone can render your public condition comfortable and respected.

From the proceedings at the adjourned meeting, held on the 15th October (see p. 215), it appears that they were each fined £20 for not serving as Constables. Mr. Thomas Potter was also elected at the same time to serve as Constable with Mr. Richard Entwisle, and upon his refusing to serve he was fined £100, and Mr. John Ratcliffe was appointed in his place. It is noted by the Deputy Steward, Mr. Samuel Kay, that this fine was paid. (See p. 216.)
